

What is claimed is:

1. A method for providing sequential data blocks having duration comprises:
providing repeated pre-scheduled multicasts of a data block; dynamically initiating a transmission of the front portion of the data block in response to a user request to receive the data block; and merging the user into a pre-scheduled multicast of the data block; wherein the dynamically initiated transmission is a multicast.